

The Marlton

NEW YORK, USA

There is a beatnik pedigree to the Marlton that makes you want to don a black rollneck and scrawl down some freestyle poetry. Sitting pretty in leafy Greenwich Village, this is where Jack Kerouac penned two of his books; where Neal Cassady bedded Carolyn; where Valerie Solanas plotted her attempted assassination of Andy Warhol. It's steeped in a sexy, slightly dark counterculture and has now had a witty revamp courtesy of Sean MacPherson of Waverly Inn and the Bowery Hotel fame, who has produced a sultry Manhattan take on a Parisian salon. Bottlegreen-velvet sofas sit beneath bold modernist paintings, there are brass fixtures and Sixties-style coffee tables and it's all deliciously Rive Gauche. Poke importantly in a novel in the Café de Flore-style café, chew the fat with the other cool cats or sink into your huge bath and plot your next trip On the Road. WEBSITE marltonhotel.com TEL 001 212 321 0100 BOOK IT Double, from £170.
